Quote of the week

"I have met with Premier Clark and will accept her resignation. I have asked Mr. Horgan to form a government, he having assured me that he can form a government which will have the confidence of the Legislative Assembly." —Lt.-Gov. Judith Guichon

Construction on Coq through the weekend

The Min. of Transportation and Infrastructure is reminding motorists to expect delays on the Coq due to two major road and bridge construction projects.

Work on the Box Canyon chain-up area continues 40km north of Hope. A further 13kms north, crews are resurfacing four lanes of the Dry Gulch Bridge, though, 3 lanes will be open to traffic at all times.

During the Canada Day long weekend, traffic volumes traditionally peak at more than 2000 vehicles per hour. Motorists should plan ahead and check live traffic conditions on DriveBC or consider avoiding travel during peak periods.

Motorists are asked to please watch for and obey posted construction signs and traffic management personnel, and adjust travel speed accordingly.

Different perspectives on Canada 150

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said he understands why many indigenous people in Canada won't be celebrating Canada's 150th birthday, and he wants them treated with respect and understanding.

While Canadians across the country fly flags from porches and don red and white face paint, indigenous groups are planning protests and ceremonial events to remind Canadians that for them, there is nothing to celebrate.

Trudeau says Canadians have to understand Canada has failed indigenous peoples for centuries and he hears what the activists on the Hill were saying [protestors erecting a teepee on Parliament Hill yesterday]
