BC Francophonie Day

March 20th is BC Francophonie Day. This year's theme is "French Language Services Matter".

Budget 2018 provides an additional $250,000 to support and promote linguistic vitality of the Francophonie. This is the first time since 2001, when BC signed its first agreement with the federal government on French language services, that provincial dollars have been designated to the Francophone Affairs Program.

BC Francophonie Day will begin with the raising of the Franco-Columbian flag outside the B.C. Parliament Buildings.

There are more than 70,000 francophones and 300,000 French-speaking people in British Columbia. Outside of Quebec, B.C. has the fourth-largest population of francophones in Canada.

The It-governor will see you now

The confidence vote that toppled Christy Clark's government on June 29, 2017, was one of the most extraordinary evenings in B.C.'s political history. As the province waited, Lt.-Gov. Judith Guichon deliberated behind closed doors on whether BC would plunge into a new election, or John Horgan would get a chance to govern. The inside story of what happened at Government House has remained untold, until now. In a new book, A Matter of Confidence: The Inside Story of the Political Battle for BC, Vancouver Sun columnist Rob Shaw and Global News B.C. reporter Richard Zussman pull back the curtain not only on that evening, but the remarkable story of Clark's rise and fall, and the backstory of Horgan's path to the premier's office.

"I don't think she's going to do it," said Clark. The premier had just emerged from a meeting with Lieutenant-Governor Judith Guichon. Her last hope to stay in power rested on Guichon agreeing to her request to dissolve parliament and call a new election.

The meeting, though lengthy, had not gone well. Clark was exceptionally skilled at reading people, a technique she'd deployed constantly during her lengthy political career. She could tell the moment she'd walked into the room that Guichon had already made up her mind. The lieutenant-governor appeared both uncomfortable and defensive. The premier nonetheless gave it her best pitch. She started by handing over an envelope containing her resignation letter, a formal step that was required after an alliance of BC NDP and Green MLAs had voted down her Liberal government on a confidence vote just two hours earlier..."

[Ed.: It reads like a suspense thriller! Check out how our /the Honorable Judy Guichon made political history!]
