Nearing the end of her Lt-Gov posting

It's a big week for the Honourable Lt-Gov Judith Guichon, what with welcoming Her Excellency the Right Honourable Governor General to BC on her first official visit to the province — and news of the appointment Ms. Janet Austin as the 30th Lieutenant Governor of BC.

"I am so pleased to welcome Janet Austin as the next Lieutenant Governor of British Columbia. As someone who has dedicated her career to championing women's equality and social change, she is a wonderful choice to represent Her Majesty The Queen in this great province," said Guichon. "Ms. Austin will continue to inspire and connect British Columbians in this role."

Judy will remain Lieutenant Governor until the installation of Ms. Austin in the coming weeks.

BC Emergency Alerting System Test

Today, Wednesday, March 21 at 1:55pm, Emergency Management BC will conduct a test of the BC Emergency Alerting System. This is part of a Canada-wide system — AlertReady — that allows government officials to issue public safety alerts through major television and radio broadcasters. This system will only be used during large-scale disasters or emergencies where loss of life is imminent and possible.

Messages delivered through BC's Emergency Alerting System will complement, not replace, existing notification methods via social media (Emergency Info BC & @EmergencyInfoBC), the Provincial Emergency Notification System (PENS) or other emergency warning functions provided by Local Authorities, First Nations and other agencies.

Testing of wireless alerts will begin in May 2018, where Canadian telecommunication companies will begin sending life-threatening emergency alerts to compatible cell phones and wireless devices. This will be in addition to existing TV and radio alerting..
