Early start to wildfire season

Two spot fires near Merritt this week have been extinguished — one along Hwy 8 towards Spences Bridge, the other on the north edge of Nicola Lake, north-east of town. A spot fire is less than 0.01 hectares (10 metres by 10 metres).

The BC Wildlife Service is on facebook, but they also have an (amazing) 'interactive wildfire map', accessible from their website home page.

Thinking outside the Box The Factory

Late last week I was given a tour of the biggest and most successful mill in town. Astonishingly, It's also operated entirely by volunteers. My visit came at the end of the workday. I was invited to examine their latest equipment.

The mill is currently running one crew. The market is slow. Yet, just a week earlier, it was running two shifts and every worker was clocking overtime.

The product this mill produces can be found all about town—beside every other coffee table, water-cooler, bar stool, pool table, telephone, and on and on. Some are now collectables. Some are coated by rust. Some were broken into pieces and used to construct new product.

This operation is community run but with no defined leadership, and I'm embarrassed to write that I don't even know the name of this outfit. The only thing that's clear is the product coming off the belt—rumours. Perhaps I'll call this operation the Rumour Mill.

The market conditions were prime not too long ago, with the unexplained disappearance of Ben Tyner. It was so busy at the mill that machinery required triple the maintenance—rumours were produced by the hour. Thus, the reason for the new equipment.

They say the new machinery is built from an experimental metal and designed to last 1000 years. My question is—will the demand still be there centuries from now? The market isn't what it was, but if past trends are accurate, and as long as folks provide an attentive ear, I guess purchasing equipment that'll survive a millennium is a good idea.

Vacation My friend Jim told me that when he asked his wife where she wanted to go on vacation, she said that being married to him was a vacation. When I commented that was a nice thing to say to him, Jim replied, "Well, actually, what she said was I was the 'last resort.'"
