Aiport could be 'open for business'

Longtime aviation advocate George Miller — who was introduced by Chris Langhaugh, and whose services were engaged by Doug Beech of Century 21 — presented a bright new future for Merritt at Tuesday's council meeting. He envisions a situation where the airport could 'get out of the doldrums & be open for business'. But, he says, there's a long way to go.

Mr. Miller says that the first step would not be to do a master plan study (something City Council earlier this year earmarked $25,000 to do), but to set up an airport advisory committee to set out a governance model, hire an airport manager, and find an 'anchor tenant'. And they've got a lead on an investor who might be interested in taking on the project & making a major investment, partly because of its perfect location, and the area's growing tourism & future development.

He also believes the project could receive major grants because of the Merritt airport's major deficiencies: lack of fencing, unkemptness, weeds growing on the runway.

Having landed at the airport earlier in the week, Mr. Miller said he was "shocked" at its state: its lack of anyone on the ground to talk to, direct access, washroom facilities, coffee or snacks, lights, or security.

Food for thought for Council. Mr. Miller believes the Merritt Saunders Airport could be of considerable economic value & give us the ability to develop an until-now-unconsidered aviation industry.

Rezoning for 4010 Walters St. passed

Citing the housing crisis in Merritt, Council granted the developer of the 75-unit apartment building proposed for 4010 Walters St. the rezoning & OCP amendment he was seeking, Tuesday after the public hearing. Now that he's past those posts, it's on to the development permit stage.

What do you never say when you are at gunpoint? Oh Shoot!

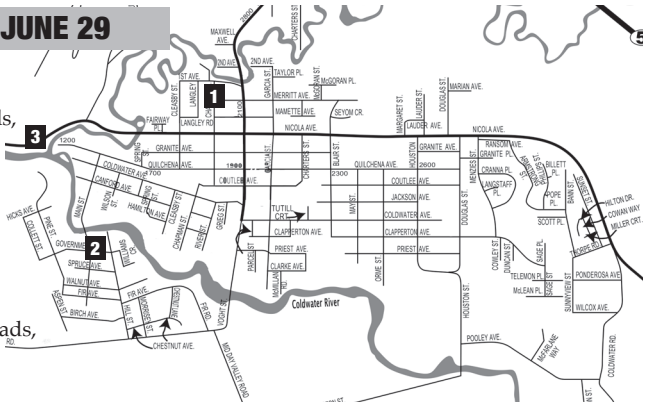

I was driving along when this man waved me down. I stopped the car and he asked me if I could give him a few directions. 'Certainly,' I replied, 'up, down, east and west.' Then I drove off.

Why don't fairies live under toadstools? Because there's not mushroom!

You can't run through a campground. You can only ran, because it's past tents.
