Invasive Japanese knotweed

The Thompson-Nicola Invasive Plant Management Committee is asking the public to be on alert for invasive Japanese knotweed and report sightings in the TNRD.

Japanese knotweed are one of the 100 worst invasive species as identified by the International Union for Conservation of Nature. The invasive perennial plant is native to eastern Asia and was introduced to North America in the 1800's as an ornamental plant. It's widely spread throughout the coastal regions of BC and several infestations are known within the TNRD.

Japanese knotweed is often mistaken for bamboo; however, it is easily distinguished by the zigzag pattern in which its broad leaves are arranged along the plant's arching stems. They are often found growing next to homes, within ornamental gardens. Its highly aggressive root system can extend 20m across and 3m deep, and can penetrate septic beds, home foundations, retaining walls, asphalt and other critical structures.

Digging and cutting plants is not recommended and could make the infestation worse. FMI www.tnipmc.com

Thinking outside the box Escape from Nimh

Answer me this—Are we on this earth to live pay-cheque-to-pay-cheque while balancing a credit debt, to give forty years to a mortgaged existence, to sweat for the system when the financial chains will remain regardless, and to thirst strictly for the Answer me this—Are we on this earth to have our minds bombarded by the agenda of big corporations, to continually have our subconscious and our decision-making process influenced by engineered information, to have our awareness placed within a box so we'll stay as screws for the system, and to constantly want an escape from Nimh?

Please, fill me in. Is this some sort of punishment? How much of the system is Godsent? And if you or I make a break as the rats did, will there be divine consequence?

A question for the ears of the Universe—Without a million dollars buried in the backyard, isn't it cruel to birth a child? I only ask this because, at times, it seems as if life is given to a servant, born to suffer and struggle. All in the name of satisfying the system. Born to parents without large amounts of cash, a child only grows to repeat the same cycle that chains most parents—to work until grey and weak, to be told what to do and think, to sacrifice the spirit for material things, and to bear the title "debt-slave".

It would appear, at times, the only thing given life to is a screw for the system, destined to endure, and this in so-called developed nations. The right to raise a child correctly is stolen by our artificial and destitute eco-political conditions. Escape I want from this experiment. Escape I desire for myself and those yet to receive a body dependent. Is it possible to rewrite our social contract or are these truly the best gifts we can leave tomorrow's children?
