Nohomin Creek fire

At 4pm on Friday afternoon, evacuation alerts issued by the TNRD's Emergency Operations Centre due to the Nohomin Creek wildfire were lifted, downgraded to 'all clear' for approximately 55 addressed properties in Electoral Area "I" (Blue Sky Country).

The fire remains active, and has been mapped at an estimated 3,745.7 hectares.

BC Wildfire Service says "There will continue to be active fire behaviour in the Stein Valley Nlaka'pamux Heritage Park. In this area, the fire is burning on steep cliffs, and rocky terrain ground crews cannot access. Lytton First Nation and BC Parks are co-managing fire management within the park's boundaries. The BC Wildfire Service will support the fire management strategy by organizing ground crews and aerial support. There will continue to be smoke and active fire within the park boundaries.

Dead salmon at TMX worksite on Coquihalla River
spurs calls for DFO to intervene

In what appears to be an early salmon run on the Coquihalla River, dead fish are showing up adjacent to Trans Mountain's in-stream work in the river, about 3 kms from its confluence with the Fraser.

Local resident Dr. Kate Tairyan photographed the dead salmon beside the Trans Mountain worksite near her home on August 1-3. Exploring other parts of the river revealed live salmon swimming upstream, but few seemed able to swim past the TM worksite.

The Department of Fisheries and Oceans only gave the permit to begin work in the river on August 1, however, they have been working near the river for the past several months, cutting trees and clearing vegetation, working part of that time with an expired permit.

This part of the Coquihalla River is an important migratory corridor for 5 species of salmon as well as steelhead trout. "The water levels are suitable for spawning salmon right now therefore this is the time for DFO to act to protect the salmon run", said Dr. Tim Takaro of Protect the Planet and a professor emeritus at SFU.

The DFO permit issued to TM allows the company to divert the river and to remove 800 square meters of instream spawning habitat.

"It's very unusual to see so many dead salmon in Coquihalla this early in the spawning season", said Dr. Tairyan. "I am appalled that Trans Mountain is granted permissions to carry forward with cutting a trench in the stream in an area so drastically altered by the devastating flooding of Nov 2021", she continued.

Trans Mountain is working in the area to replace part of its existing pipeline as well as install its new larger pipeline. The new pipeline will cross the Coquihalla River in multiple locations, several of which were washed out last year exposing the old pipe.

Twin Sisters The twin girls walk into a store. After selecting a few items they go to the cashier. The cashier looks at them and says, "Are you two girls sisters?" The twins both laugh and then one says, "Sisters? We aren't even religious."
