NVSAR have not found missing hunter

Claus Fahrmann

Yesterday, NV Search And Rescue thanked the teams who have helped this week with a search to find a missing hunter in the Glimpse Lake area: Central Okanagan Search & Rescue, Penticton & District Search & Rescue, Princeton GSAR, Hope Volunteer Search and Rescue, Logan Lake Search & Rescue, Vernon Search And Rescue Group Societyd Shuswap Search and Rescue, and Kamloops Search and Rescue — as well as all the NVSAR members.

Claus ' Myles' Fahrmann was out hunting and – according to social media – he has not been heard from since Saturday Oct. 31. He was due back on Sunday but did not return. He is known to hunt in the Douglas Lake Road area between Merritt and Falkland.

Fahrmann was last pinged in the Merritt area, and his older model van was located near Glimpse Lake, but after 4 operational periods which ended yesterday, there has been no sign of the missing man. Anyone with info is asked to contact Vernon RCMP, reference file 2026-19134.

Lawyer fogs Mirror

One of the Mirror's favourite anti-heroes appeared for a preliminary hearing and a special sout-sitting Wednesday. The hearing had to do with a July 4 fracas between the accused and another man over at the Lariat Motel. Like so many of the accused's run-ins, this one was limned in a chiaroscuro of tragi-comedy. (Had to do it! Had so say it that way. Hiigh linguistic toying, to throw lo-comedy into relief — it's the contrast!) Laywer, Ken Tessovich engineered a publication ban, which thrusts us into ever greater vaguery than usual.

A tall guy and a small guy - how were characterized throughout the hearing - fell into disagreement around 4:30pm,

The City's Flood

Cont'd, over

A woman says to her husband, "Honey, I'm backing the car into the garage. Can you please let me know when I hit the wall?" Her husband says, "Sure." Bang! The car hits the back of the garage. And her husband says, "It's 2:30 pm."

A guy takes his car to an auto body shop for a paint job... "How much to paint my car?" he asks. The mechanic says, "We have two options: $2,000 with flaws, or $1,000 with no flaws." "Well, give me the one with no flaws, obviously!" the guy says. A few days later, he comes back to pick up the car. He looks at the hood and says, "Hey, what's this speck of dust in the paint?" The mechanic pulls out the invoice and asks, "Oh, so you found a flaw? "Nope! Looks perfect to me!"

July 4. The small guy allegedly tried to smack the tall guy with a wine jug. The jug flew thr a rainbow arc, smashing onto Nicola Ave, attracting the attention of two young men passing by in a truck. They testified to watching'an Abbott & Costello routine, with the small guy "running in every direction" to evade the displeasure of the tall guy. After seeing what they thought might be a knife in the hands of the tall guy, the young guys called the gendarmes. Police arrived, and put the rum on the tall guy. He did not go easily. The Crown wanted to show aggressive resistance; the defence, a simple, innocent flight response. One witness said (circumspectly) the tall guy "was communicating his dis-satisfaction at being in custody." (indeed!)

The court reeled under the evidence of the small guy, whose testimony threw everyone into a continuous loop — "You were in #6, at the Lariat," said the Prosecutor. "Yeah." "Where did you go then?" "To #6." "Then where?" asked the Prosecutor. "Back to #8." "Where did you go when you left #8" . "Back to #6." Lunches were brought in as Prosecutor & witness went over the ground, again and again and again. Indepenclent analysts say that had the man traveled between 6 & 8 as often as he said, a ditch 4 feet deep would have been worn into the Lariat lot. In the end, with everyone in court suffering from 'ternis-neck' the accused lost the preliminary, and has to face trial at a later date.

—Gordon E. Cockle, Merritt Morning Mirror #241, Friday Nov 8, 1996
