Thompson-Nicola Regional Library

Calculate how much you've saved by using your library card!

TNRL has a fun way to figure out how much money you've saved using your library card. The Value Calculator estimates the value of the books, movies, video games, eBooks, and eAudiobooks that you've borrowed over the last 12 months. It's fun, and it's real savings!

To calculate your savings, go to www.tnrl.ca/about-us/support-your-library/value-calculator/

Changes to Accessory Dwelling Units

TNRD is proposing changes to their amend Zoning Bylaw No. 2400 to allow accessory dwelling units on eligible parcels between 1 and 3.99 hectares, providing greater residential flexibility while maintaining consistency with applicable land use regulations and policies. And they are looking for input from TNRD residents.

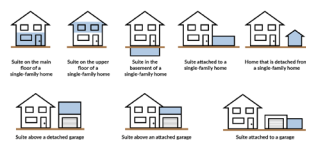

The amendment would keep the density the same for rural areas but the built form may change, which would allow secondary suites to be within a separate code-compliant building on lots that are 1 hectare (2.47 acres) or larger.

Currently, the zoning allows secondary suites in all residential zones, as long as they are within the principal dwelling. The zoning amendment would expand housing options and increase flexibility for property owners by permitting detached secondary suites in the form of Accessory Dwelling Units (ADUs).

To help preserve the rural character of TNRD communities, only one detached ADU is permitted on parcels between 1 and 3.99 hectares in size. A second detached ADU would require approval from the TNRD Board. Properties with an existing secondary suite or duplex would be required to decommission the secondary dwelling unit before a building permit can be issued for an ADU.

You can review the bylaw & proposed amendments on the TNRD website: www.tnrd.ca/planning-development/planning/secondary-dwellings/ To submit your input, contact TNRD Planning Services, 250-377-8673 or planning@tnrd.ca

Black Friday tips to avoid scams

Black Friday deals been popping up in inboxes and social media feeds, promising major savings on everything from electronics to holiday gifts. But with tighter budgets and increasingly sophisticated online shopping scams, the Better Business Bureau of BC & Yukon wants to remind consumers that the biggest discount isn't always the best deal.

According to the 2026 Retail Council of Canada (RCC) and Leger Holiday Shopping Survey, British Columbians plan to spend an aver- Cont'd, over age of $993 this holiday season, a 12% decrease from 2025. With affordability top of mind, consumers may be spending more time searching for deals ahead of Black Friday on November 27 and Cyber Monday on November 30.

And scammers are looking to capitalize on that same desire to save. Fake social media advertisements, lookalike retail websites and misleading promotions can make it increasingly difficult to distinguish legitimate bargains from fraudulent offers. Artificial intelligence is also making deceptive advertisements and online storefronts appear more convincing.

The scam: Online shopping scams often begin with an irresistible offer. The website looks professional, the reviews appear positive and a countdown timer encourages them to act quickly.

After making a purchase, the consumer may receive a counterfeit or poor-quality product, discover unexpected recurring charges or never receive their order at all. In some cases, fraudulent websites are designed to collect personal and payment information.

Tips: 1. Make a list and stick to your budget. Before browsing Black Friday sales, decide what you actually need and how much you can afford to spend. Compare prices. Don't let limited-time offers push you into unnecessary purchases. 2. Research the business before you buy. An attractive website or thousands of social media followers don't necessarily mean a business is trustworthy. 3. Don't fall for deals that seem too good to be true. Be cautious of unusually steep discounts. Double-check website addresses, verify contact info and avoid purchasing directly through unfamiliar social media links. 4. Read the fine print before checking out. Check shipping costs, currency, duties, return policies and any subscription terms before completing your purchase. 5. Use secure and traceable payment methods. Be wary of sellers insisting on payment through e-transfer, wire transfer, cryptocurrency or gift cards. These payment methods can make recovering your money more difficult if something goes wrong. 6. Watch for fake delivery notifications and phishing messages. Rather than clicking unfamiliar links, check your order status directly through the retailer's official website or delivery provider. 7. Know your return policies and keep your receipts. Promotions may include final-sale conditions or shorter return windows. Review refund and exchange policies before buying. Save order confirmations, receipts & product descriptions.
